Family and Friends of FCCV,

Does anyone else feel like the weeks are just flying by? Not only does it feel like they are flying by, it feels like they are speeding up! Deadlines are approaching, reports are due, emails are waiting ... when is there time just to sit and be in the moment? Have you taken time this week to let the sun warm your face ... to listen to a bird sing you his song ... to see that beautiful flowers are beginning to show themselves to us? For me, these moments are reminders of God and God's beautiful creation. We will celebrate Holy Communion on Sunday. This is a wonderful time to sit and be in the moment ... to be in God's presence and remember what God is doing in our lives.

Our scripture text is from Acts 8. An Ethiopian Eunuch, while reading text from the prophet Isaiah, crosses paths with Philip. Philip asks him, "Do you really understand what you are reading?" To which the Ethiopian Eunuch responds, "Without someone to guide me, how could I?" And then Philip is invited to share what the text is conveying.

I am inviting you to come and hear what the text is saying to us! God is still speaking!

Come and experience God's love!

Grace be to y'all,
Robin

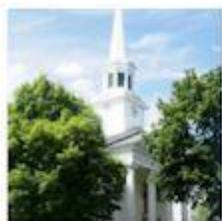

Prelude to the Preludes

For this week I've selected a few "seasonal" preludes. "Spring Nocturne" and "Orange Blossoms" are original pieces by Rex Koury and Georges MacMaster, respectively. Then a couple popular tunes from quite a few years ago will hopefully offset some of the cloudy weather we've been having. They are: "Sun of My Soul" and "Jesus Wants Me for a Sunbeam." The Communion music begins with a pensive "Cantilene" by Handel (transcribed from a flute sonata), and concludes with Darlene Zschech's "Worthy Is the Lamb," published in 2000. ---James
